Dr Charles Brantly is a UK-trained and qualified general practitioner. He graduated from Imperial College Medical School and completed his general practice training in London. Charles had developed an interest in Hong Kong over many years and made the move to relocate here with his family in 2014. Charles has an old-fashioned approach to general practice and believes in offering a “cradle to grave” service to his patients. He has a special interest in preventative medicine, cardiovascular disease, mental health and sports science.

Charles grew up in the expatriate community of Brazil and speaks fluent Portuguese and Spanish. He is married to a Hong Konger and has two daughters. He is a keen squash player and enjoys outdoor activities. Charles works full time as a doctor and is also a managing partner at Central Health medical practice. He cares for patients in the hospital setting when required and provides out of hours services to his regular patients.
